Pursuit of Passions…Vintage Auto Racing Today

SYNOPSIS: There's something pure and exhilarating about seeing a racing Ferrari in action or witnessing a Shelby GT350 blasting down a straight a way. Auto racing fans love nostalgia and the wide variety of race car shapes, sounds and spectacle they provide. Vintage racing offers visual and aural delight which is exactly what race fans love.

What if you had the opportunity to race your own vintage Corvette, Porsche, Stock Car or Ferrari F2 on legendary tracks? Well, the Sportscar Vintage Racing Association (SVRA) creates that opportunity, and Freewheelin' Films has captured these unique events in a 30-minute special allowing viewers a behind-the-scenes look at the spirit and atmosphere of some of these exciting racing events.

SVRA events offer the spectacle of racing cars from decades past, restored to their original racing specifications, in action on the track. Corvettes, Shelby GT-350s racing against Cobras, Mustangs, Camaros and Jaguars. Midgets, Mini Coopers, Triumph Spitfires, Alfa Romeo Giuliettas – all of them back on the track and racing at the same time.

HOST: Appropriately titled by USA Today as "Mr. Motor Racing," Paul Page has been a network television and radio sports host & anchor for more than three decades. He joined the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Radio Network in 1974 where he was elevated to "Voice of the 500" as well as hosted NBC's "SportsWorld" in 1978.

In 1987, Paul left NBC to lead ABC's Sports motor racing efforts and earned two Emmys for Best Sports Special, coverage of the Indianapolis 500 Mile Race. Paul has also been part of telecasts or series that account for 11 Emmy awards. In 2004 Paul hosted his 25th Indianapolis 500. In 2014 the Indianapolis Speedway asked him to return to the role of "Voice of the 500" broadcasting, and not only the 500 but every race in the IndyCar series on IndyCar radio.

Paul's skills are not limited to motorsports.
He was host/play-by-play for coverage of Americas Cup,
The FINA World Swimming Championships, Figure Skating and the X-Games.
